

Greetings!

Representative plaintiff cross examinations were be completed February 2026, and then certification would have, at long last, been on the horizon.

Unfortunately, we began dealing with further Attorney General delays following that webinar.

First was a death in the family of a key government lawyer, with a request for a two month delay prior to reconvening. After that, our cross examinations were not scheduled until the second week of June.

The summary above oversimplifies, as there is far more activity and conversation than I can disclose in a public email. Suffice it to say; we were frustrated.

We're hopeful these dates will stick ("hope springs eternal") and that we can get through this phase quickly. Cross examination of our affidavits merely confirms that representative plaintiffs are suitable to proceed, and certification will be the next step. That said, my limited experience with the Canadian judiciary suggests they're capable of an even lower speed during the summer.

Thank you once again for being alongside after this extended season. As we move toward addressing the injustices and a season in court, our legal costs will mount. We will ramp up fundraising in the months ahead, and trust you can help get the word out to friends and family.

As always, please don't hesitate to email with questions or concerns.
